Goddamn awesomeness.

(I've seen Eco's list of potential eras. I won't spoil it, but I am gleeful happy to get any one of these expansions).

Since I'm not entirely sure when the backers are going to be asked for their eras/expansions and I'm still undecided about what splat I'd want to see in Mississippi alongside Promethean, I'm open to hear suggestions. It'll be hard to sell me on splats I don't care for like Mage or Beast, but I'd still like to hear all your ideas.

My go-to gamelines for crepuscolar atmospheres tend to be Vampire, Changeling, Promethean and Geist. Since my first pick for Steamboat is Promethean and you already have it in mind, I think I'd narrow it down to one of the other three. They all fit the Southern Gothic vibe and I think that it all depends on you.

The three lines all explore different shades of it better than the others, with Vampire representing the undeath resonating with the end of an Era, Changeling the bittersweet tones and Geist the love for life and having to deal with the heavy baggage of the past that haunts people.

Beast can do crepuscolar too (well, all gamelines can do anything, but you get my point), but that's more of a romantic "me against the world" than anything, not to mention you don't care much about it, so I won't even suggest it

I think, we're it me, it would depend somewhat on the other splat combinations. Promethean and Geist would work well. Promethean and Demon have the whole Angel/Quashmal thing (and could tie into the Industrial and Frontier aspect of it). Steamboats seem a little transient for the territorial minded Werewolves and Beasts, to me, but they could work. Mummy is hard to fit in (and would probably better fit another era with Promethean better), but I can see a few stories in that vein.

Malkydel: "And the Machine dictated; let there be adequate illumination."
Yossarian: "And lo, it was optimal."

Not doing Beast for Mississippi Steamboats might be fine anyways, since we would be double-dipping a bit due to A Fearful Lesson's existence.

I mean, Memphis is on the Mississippi... I'm really curious to see what notes writers would hit with Mummy, apart from the obvious ones (Nile analogue, slave trade-shuankhsen hooks).
That, and I'm interested to see someone tackle Mummy/Promethean crossover.

As for other options, Cinder's picks look pretty appealing too.
I'm just happy to see you decided to save Steamboats. I'm sure whichever you choose will have some interesting possibilities to explore.

My big suggestion would be to do a crossover that hasn't been seen yet. While I have my biases (particularly towards Mummy) I don't think you can really go wrong here. Here's a list of them. The stars represent eras we technically have seen before, but the rules didn't really interact, so I'm not counting them. I've excluded Mage and Beast since you said you have no interest in them.

Vampire - Werewolf
Vampire - Promethean*
Vampire - Changeling*
Vampire - Hunter
Vampire - Geist
Vampire - Mummy
Vampire - Deviant
Werewolf - Promethean
Werewolf - Changeling
Werewolf - Hunter
Werewolf - Mummy
Werewolf - Demon
Werewolf - Deviant
Promethean - Hunter
Promethean - Geist
Promethean - Mummy
Promethean - Demon
Promethean - Deviant
Changeling - Hunter
Changeling - Geist*
Changeling - Mummy
Changeling - Demon
Changeling - Deviant
Hunter - Geist
Hunter - Demon
Hunter - Deviant
Mummy - Demon
Mummy - Deviant
Demon - Deviant

Hm. let me think for a few I might like to see on that.

- Vampire - Geist: Bronze Age Collapse. As society in the Mediterranean is collapsing, the Bound struggle to keep the flood of Sea People, a mysterious army of ghosts from the Ocean Below, from pouring in full force into the living world, while the Kindred struggle to maintain what little power they can as society crumbles in chaos. What could be compelling the Sea People to flee the Underworld in such numbers? And why do some ghosts speak of terrible "Birds of Dis?"
- Vampire - Mummy: Honestly, I don't know if it needs an era, but I like to toy with the idea of an Elder who was present for the fall of Irem, and since Fog of Ages seems to no longer be a thing, that could make such an Elder a very interesting factor in a Mummy game, especially if they knew one of the mummies personally. Could this profane, hollow imitation of the Deathless be the key to unlocking your past? And how much is truth, and how much lies?
- Promethean - Geist: I would have actually made the Dust Bowl Promethean/Geist if I could have. Depression-era Sin-Eaters just feels right to me. A travelling Bound snake-oil salesman who moonlights as an exorcist, only to encounter another travelling snake-oil salesman, whose snake-oil happens to actually be his own alchemical bodily fluids!
- Promethean - Demon: I already said it before, but Book of Exodus feels like the one. Placing the God-Machine and the Principle in a game of chess that neither even seems to know it is playing, with Demons, Prometheans, and the Hebrews caught in the middle. And according to both the Angels and the Qashmallim, neither side seems to be directing Moses...
- Hunter - Deviant - Demon : Cold War seems like the place. I'd actually make the Cold War Demon/Hunter/Deviant. Demons on both sides of the conflict trying to manipulate things to reach their Hell, either by winning with one side, trying to push the world into a nuclear apocalypse to bring the God-Machine down by force, or just trying to make sure things stay where they are. In the meantime, the Demons have been using Stigmatic operatives, as they always have, but they've enountered...other agents. Some were expected. Most Agencies have been aware of groups like America's Valkyrie and VASCU, and the Russian Tenburo, but there seem to be other, less-known quantities becoming involved, that could threaten to throw the balance of power out the window.

Genius: the Transgression 2E is a thing that's being worked on.

I would point out that we have nice setting elements for two gamelines that would be cool to update and show in 'earlier days' - in Vampire, we have whole city of New Orleans as official setting, not touched since from 1E Damnation City book. As Interview with Vampire fan (and general Vampires Chronicles), I really would love to see the city in 19th century, with it's independance from rest of USA (as just ended French colony), plantations, Voodoo and now coming electricity. Just I point you to this cool scene from 1994 movie...

(By the way, we are waiting for the Vampire Chronicles TV series now)

Other gameline is Changeling - to that we were 'just' having spoiled that New Orleans is Greatest Goblin Market in USA (with Courts based on Coins and Trade) and at mystical crossroads of Hedge in America, somehow very Gaiman's Neverwhere-style. Both are interesting settings to me o explore with Steamboats Era.

What two gamelines would you stick in a Jewish revolt Era, set in Roman Judea?

I'd probably go Mage and Promethean personally.

I like these ideas a lot. Unfortunately, since we're already getting Promethean/Changeling with 7 Wonders, I might have to rule that out. Promethean/Geist would be a dream for me since they're my two favorites, but Vampire is a really strong choice, too. I've always been a little partial to Vampire in this time period, but I've been hesitant since Vampire/Promethean already happened with the Black Death chapter in DEC. But as @Second Chances pointed out, that wasn't a true crossover era, so I think we're good.

I guess it's ultimately up to the devs, but I'll definitely have to share all this with them when the time comes!

I have three primary Eras I am considering and one that exists only as a back up, (mostly because I don't want to turf it). Basically, if I can't sum up why it would awesome to have the Era and how we can get a heap of storyhooks and ideas from that crossover in THAT time period in particular, then it didn't make it. More arbitrarily, I'm not going to expand an Era that is already getting expanded or try to add the same gameline to more than one Era or the same Era two different lines. Hence why Promethean in Light of the Sun was cut. (I am considering another Era that I feel is a better fit for a Pilgrimage story and the setting. Double tapped).

The remaining eras I am considering adding to include the French Revolution, the Promethean one and Light of the Sun. With a wild card backup I am really tring not go forward because I am...less than versed on the period in question, amongst other reasons.

So unfortunately I can't do all the lovely ideas. I guess we won't get to see some of them. On the other hand, I am willing to share some of my pitches with the other expanders, in the hopes they might get adopted. The reason I am being intentionally vague now is the Onyx Path legal requirements. Remember, if I share details in public, the writers can't use the ideas.

Thoughts ripple out, birthing others
