It might seem weird but would the green lantern corps work as a Hunter the Vigil conspiracy with the ring being an endowment?

Completed campaign: Scion 2nd Edition. Les Légendes Currently playing: Being a dad for a 3 year old daughter and a 2 years old son and now a beautiful new baby.

It could, it would just be a pretty versatile one as a straight conversion.

There was a nice MUD that had the Green Lantern Corps as a guild, basically a class that had things summed up mechanically. They changed it for legal reasons but the basics are still there. Again, a lot of powers. I think they shine through a lens instead of using their power through a ring.

That said, there's a lot of power. Creating projections, small and big, including animated 'minions,' energy blasts, creating armor and weapons, translating languages, 'scanning' things, holding things in stasis.

For Chronicles of Darkness, it would be easier to have things limited by dot range, with the dot signifying your mastery of Willpower or whatever, each dot allowing you to do more and more, even if that's not quite how it's portrayed in the comics.

For a more 'real' conversion, you would just make the rings artifacts. They are willing to choose wildly different lifeforms as bearers, people from all over the moral spectrum. Then have the individual able to deal with its powers based on their own Attributes and effected by Skills.

Oh, yeah, definitely. An idealistic kid who gains a super-powered alter ego that he can transform into at will.

Heck, Billy and Shazam are even metaphysically distinct from each other like a Princess's normal and Transformed selves. Remember when the universe got split into adults and children, and Shazam/Billy was used as an intermediary since he could switch freely between them?

Genius: the Transgression 2E is a thing that's being worked on.

Swamp Thing could be a woodblood Ogre Or A Nemesis Beast, with the "Green" being the Lair. I prefer the changeling route, would make him more similar to Beastman (Dual Kith Hunter Heart/Runnerswift Beast), which would make the Red and the Green their respective keepers.
Lobo Looks Like A powerful Anakim Collector to me, or Perhaps a ravager.
Killercroc is another Changeling, Coldscale Ogre.
Scarecrow is a Namtaru Ravager, with a heavy Focus on Nightmares and Lots of Science and occult. Maybe throw in Nightmare Fist.
Aquaman could be a Makara Tyrant, or a mage with life and mind.
Arrow is simply a Hunter. Batman is more likely to be a Beast (Eshmaki Nemsis) or some sort of Darkling, though i prefer the former. Mimir's wisdom would definitly help explaining his (undeniably) Superhuman amount of degrees and detective skills. From the Shadows is obvious, and Epic potential (Strength) is a thing here. Relentless Hunter for the amount of punishment he takes and still goes on.
Bizarro is an abyssal reflection of Superman the obrimos?

But if Superman's a Beast, are abyssal reflections of non-mages a thing?

Reflection probably isn't the best way to word it but yeah, the Abyss really only tends to target mages because they're its primary method of entry into the world while also attempting to kick it out. Just like spirits, though, they aren't limited to interacting with their main gameline.

Scarecrow would be a Fear-urged scientist. What he does is entirely mundane, but his psychosis is driven by something else.

Demon-blooded with Sum of All Fears and a mental Stigmata/Glitch?

An urged is someone with a spirit Fettered to them, using its Influence on them to create an urge in the person, which in this case is to spread fear.

I know. I'm suggesting a possible alternative.

Scarecrow fits quite nicely as our local King of Autumn. He adores his autumnal imagery, and uses his onieromancy to wander the minds of the inmates of Arkham for glamour. As a twist, his durance was a mixture of the Scarecrow of Oz and the legend of Ichabod Crane. His keeper was originally the wicked witch of the west, but after the Dorothy incident, "Elfie" has lost her Titles, and Crane holds her amnesiac charlatan butt hostage as his glamour-junkie "sister wife". The image the player was using was the bad guy in the Crow.

He works closely with pre-madness Harleen Quinzel, a mage and fellow onieromancer based vaguely on the Cell and Paprika. We have yet to RP the Joker's capture, her attempt to dreamdive, and her subsequent fractured Wisdom, but the idea I will be going for is that her tulpa manifests as the Joker, and various "pranks", to contrast the heath ledger style seriousness of the Joker himself. Indeed, one of the big spoiler secret reveals will be that Harley and Joker aren't actually a couple--its all in Harley's head, made real by her tulpa.

The Penguin is the King of the Winter Court, and so far Gotham's freehold is very mafia esque, even sometimes referring to monarchs as faerie godfathers and godmothers. They're currently trying to fix the Bulwark, by recruiting a Summer Monarch and trying to figure out how to make Poison Ivy crown as Spring Queen.

I triiiiiiiied to make Swamp Thing a Beast, but the storyline and mechanics simply didn't fit in the slightest. I couldn't give him a spread of powers that fit right, and unlike many other characters, I really wanted Swamp Thing to be visibly disfigured, like Grundy (a promethean). So for Swampy, I'm likely to go with Claimed, by a powerful elemental spirit. The Green and the Red have only been briefly touched on by mages, and as such, the pcs are assuming the Green and Red are "divisions" within the Primal Wilds. This may not be far from the truth, who knows yet.

And btw, my players straight up threatened to QUIT if Batman didn't secretly turn out to be human. I seriously would not recommend trying to do any shenanigans with that idea. I tried doing Beast with him, and it simply ruined the whole feeling and, indeed, the whole POINT of Batman. Even still, most of Gotham assumes him to be a vampire (thanks to Owlman and Manbat, the former being his Strix-possessed "brother" Thomas, the latter being a.. well, a vampire with Protean and a bad habit of frenzy). It did result in the almost unheard of situation of a "mundane human" being the Apex of Gotham City's Hive. He is well aware of this fact, and plays up on it the best he can.

As for Superman (technically, Superboy), he ended up....a Solar Exalted XD. Specifically, an Athletics supernal Zenith caste. Powers wise, it fits perfectly, and it makes him the most "alien" being I've introduced to the game so far. None of the CofD races really fit his theme well, and him being a remnant of a time and world "before the Darkness" gave him a mythic resonance. The Beasts can get Kinship with him, Mages believe him to be the last living Atlanta, Demons think he is the ultimate weapon against the God Machine (well, he DOES punch reality in the face..)..

My only sadness is the distinct lack of "uratha" type characters in DC. When I started, Bane was going to be a Blood Talon... and then Deviant was revealed as the next gameline. Beast Boy and Vixen were close, but the latter fit better as a Thyrsus. So far our only major werewolf npcs are Universal Movie Monster based, as descendants of the Talbot family. I tacked on Mammoth and Shimmer, but in Shimmer's case it was a stretch.

I like the idea of a nonChroD Superman, somehow. Huh.

The humanity of Batman is often a point of discussion, about how it defines him and makes his actions more meaningful (btw, I am one of the people that say he absolutely is not a normal human, not even a perfected human. to me he is definitly metahuman. He repeatedly does things far outside the realm of human ability, but that is a topic for another matter) and I see why that is intriguing. So yeah. Keep us updated =)

I just watched this video about how the DC Universe is really a science fiction reality based on divergent geography, and now I want to start working on this again... Damn it DC, release an Unlimited App like Marvel!
