The hunting ground for the Red Centre in Australia suggested a particularly interesting past for the Uratha there, dominated likely by one of the Firstborn. It would be interesting to see their world perhaps as it has its first interactions with the 'regular' ones.

I'm big on the clash of cultures, though. Still for the South American and African colonizations.

Though I think 50's Soviet Union would be better than 50's America.

In the past, I've suggested this for Vampire - but it would make a good mix

They did not. Werewolves got 70s New York in the Bowery Dogs.

Ahh ..ok. Well ... Werewolves in the jungles of Vietnam would work .. Demons might work for all the political and secret service crap that was going on in the background .. Beast maybe, hidden in the jungles preying on the villages or on the invading troops .. Sin Eaters or Hunters might work.

I've half written a setting for it. It's not a Dark Era, is a sourcebook for Spain, but I detailed it so much, that there's enough info for at least a Flashpoint (from Ancient Mysteries).

LAND OF THE DAMNED: SPAIN (Spanish): Land of the Damned: Spain, Kingdoms of Blood: Spain; Cities of the Damned: Barcelona, Valencia, Carthian Constitution (1812), Three Arrows Pact:

OTHERS (Spanish): Demon: The Redemption, Bloodlines: The Forgotten

1970s-1990s Boston: Mage/Hunter: Southie Stories: The infamous mob war that ripped the city apart and exposed the corruption in the FBI's offices for the world to see.

Geist/Changeling during a Mars colonization period.

I'd love to see the Satanic Panic era, but I'd like to see Descent in that era. Setting Descent during eras of paranoia and Cold War-isms feels a lot like low hanging fruit.

Promethean: Orlando would be neat. The theme parks and nearby tech havens are really heavy into robotics around here. I've done Orlando Demon using the attractions and some of the weirder rumors around town, they'd be cool to cast into Promethean and possibly Mage (there's a lot of occult rumors about the attractions).

Perhaps...But I don't know if the kind of paranoia in Demon is really the sort of moral panic that the Satanic Panic brings to mind. I think you could certainly fit them, but it doesn't seem like a totally natural fit at first glance.

Genius: the Transgression 2E is a thing that's being worked on.

Though, if you're doing Soviet Promethean, wouldn't you just go with the era of the Great Purges?

Because sometimes a stable era with proper themes is more interesting than an unstable era. Just as Promethean is "what does it mean to be human and can I get there?", 1950s is the first introspective period in Soviet Russia; when they started to ask "what does it mean to be communist and can I get there?", especially in the Kruschev era. The Purges were more straightforward with-us-or-against-us, not very complementary themes.

I agree, the satanic panic wasn't so much paranoia so much as it was a moral panic, one partly set off by various anxieties of 80s America and by bad science that created false accusations via coercive interviewing techniques.

seriously, that book I keep mentioning, satan's silence? read it, it explains the whole thing better than I could.

Despite the user name I am actually bigender.

Okay, but SunlessNick was directly comparing it to 50s USA. The implication I took was that the themes present in such an era would be better served in the USSR. I guess i jumped to the conclusion that it was the paranoia element that was being discussed.

That said, Prometheans suffering from being perpetual outsiders is a central theme of the game, and that fear of outsiders is a big element in sparking the mass operations that actually killed most of the victims of the purges.

Bad science, false accusations, coercive techniques? Implanted memories? The potential for horrible things to actually be happening in the background using fake panic as a cover? The potential for cults and God playing all sides to create moral confusion? It's a perfect pitch for Descent. God is constantly pushing on religions already because they provide almost perfect cover - you can get a believer to do anything for almost no reason at all, and they're almost always socially acceptable, especially when they're crusading against a "fake" evil. At the same time, you get to demonize, well, demons.

Moral panic, occult symbolism, and fear of media plays very well into the themes of Descent.

You might be able to sneak some Deviant in there, too. After all, the 80s and 90s were the period of the heavy duty body horror and occult flicks that were a large component of the panic.

I like what you are saying here, don't get me wrong, but my plan for 80s demon was more focused on 1985, AKA the year of the spy, in which a number of soviet agents in the US intelligence rose were arrested right as Gorbachev became leader of the soviet union, complicating US-Soviet relations at a crucial time.And of course, the GM is pushing all this along to pursue it's plans for the end of the cold war, plans that not only the unchained would want to see fail if only they knew of them...
