What do you want out of the Storyteller's Vault?

I stuck a poll on Twitter, but thought having an actual topic to discuss the question might be worthwhile too. There are several of us who write community content for CofD on the forums, so I wanted to know what you feel would be useful/worth buying. I've brained stormed some content that could be part of products in the spoiler below. Obviously many of these could be part of a single product and there may very well be things I haven't thought of, which is why I felt a forum thread would be worthwhile.

Spoiler

Anyhow, if anyone is willing to share their thoughts/feelings, I really appreciate it and I'm sure other creators would find it useful too. What would you like to see?

Definitely I'd prefer deeper explorations of existing lore

As a newbie ST, the first six are the one's I'd be most interested in. Pre-Made Chronicles would be my priority #1, but more plot hooks, settings, & characters to use "Out of the box" would be great as well. New Clans would also be interesting.

Tough choice, that is a very nice list. I would say new ways to customize characters and antagonists, so z-splats, magic items, powers and some pre-made chronicles.

Basically, things players can leverage to flesh out their characters (magic tattoos, bonded relics, occult mutations, etc) and a toolkit new GMs can use to easily setup a chronicle. The rules are pretty easy to understand, but building an entire cast and setting from scratch can be intimidating.

New experiences are the font of creativity, when seeking inspiration, break your routine.

The Agathos Kai Sophos, an Acanthus Legacy of strategists (Mind/Time)
The Szary Strażnik, an Obrimos Legacy whose invisible hands guide through the Glyphs of Fate (Fate/Prime)

More on various Lower Depths, aside from Dis and Duat.

What do I want out of the Stortyeller's Vault?

An actual okaying on the website guidelines that it's okay to post Hunter: the Vigil 2nd Edition material.

For myself and a lot of my gaming circles, too much extra character customization is actually a turn off. We tend to find the existing lists of many options already too big (esp. powers and Merits) when you start allowing multiple supplements and so on. More examples of character customization that the books intend to be homebrewed are probably the exception here (z-splats and custom magical items for example)..

While I agree a lot of the new GM oriented material would be good to be able to steer new fans towards to help to grow the community, being a bit selfish what I'd love to see that's not on the list are things like end of 1e Chroniclers Guide and Mirrors oriented material to help groups fine tune the games to their tastes a bit more directly than the rules currently do.

Hunter 2e as in "using the adaptations from the new Core book" is no, but the Mortal Remains stop gap mechanics are a fair game as they are considered Hunter 1e (even though with updated mechanics). So do with that what you want shrugs

(reminds me I should bother my sister again to finish the art for my Hunter product which just sits on the virtual shelf too much time)

Basically, I'll always be a fan for more Horrors, Dark Eras, splats and lore, not necessirly on this order

Check my STV content, Or My Homebrew

"And all our knowledge is, Ourselves to know"- An Essay on Man

I now blog in here

Yeah, I feel like the STV is a natural place to see the bones of the franchise broken and reset in new and interesting ways. Or stealth updates.

I meant Hunter 2E.

That I can't control (and 100% agree), but word on Twitter is Mummy 2e is coming in October, so hopefully Deviant and Hunter 2e are not far behind. And that's from the Vault's Twitter account, not random rumors, so it should actually happen.

Seconding this! The large collection of rule variants were some of my favorite content in 1E, and something I really miss in 2E.
