2E Familars

nofather
Member

Join Date: Nov 2013
Posts: 11016

Share
Post

06-23-2015, 11:22 PM #91

> Originally posted by Omegaphallic
> And how does a Werewolf deal with running into a Gulmoth in the Shadow?

Obviously there'd be many different reactions to seeing such a thing. I imagine they'd be able to sense something is off about it but not be able to pin down what. A lot's going to depend on mechanics of them, and how many werewolf gifts would work on them, and which ones. In first edition the gulmoth we've seen just look like specialized spirits, which aren't exactly anything new. But generally you'd expect the standard apprehension for something new that doesn't fit in your territory.

From there it depends on how territorial the werewolves are. Since werewolves aren't forced into the 'spirit police' role anymore, they might just acknowledge it as a weird thing to keep track of in case it or its summoner becomes worthy of a hunt, in other cases they might drive it off, kill it, try to shove it into a fetish, find out the rite doesn't work, seek out an ancient rite that belonged to the Antiwolves, shove that sucker into a fetish and get a renown for it, the usual kind of thing.

Quote Flag

Isator Levi

06-24-2015, 03:01 AM #92

I think the next category after Gulmoth and Acamoth wouldn't be "Abyssal human/vampire/etc" so much as "Abyssal material thing". Stuff like the Invisible Codex or the brain spiders. A humanoid being could be in there, but I don't think it would be approached as its own category.

Member

I have approximate knowledge of many things.
Write up as I play Xenoblade Chronicles.

Join Date: Nov 2013
Posts: 17900

Share
Post

Quote Flag

MCN
Member

Join Date: Jan 2014
Posts: 3479

06-24-2015, 07:36 AM #93

> Originally posted by Omegaphallic
> The Abyssal Template, I assume it has limitations on what you can stick it on, you can't stick it on human, vampires, changelings, Angels, Dominions, Prometheans, Quashillams, Strix, or Supernal Entities for example right? Or can you, after all a Abyssal Entity could claim a human host for example.

Well, right now, I'm personally assuming it works like Infernal tainting, so only ephemeral entities are targets. That means ghosts, spirits, goetics, and possibly angels (specifically, Exiles who are cut off from the God Machine and Infrastructure, but still are ephemeral entities instead of physical demons). Strix aren't technically ephemeral entities, so they might get a pass. All fae are generally physical creatures, so the same with them. The Qashmal are an unknown quantity.

> And how does a Werewolf deal with running into a Gulmoth in the Shadow?

Probably the same way they deal with the Maeljin and maelnets in the Wounds. I doubt they can tell the difference, if there even is one.

> Originally posted by Omegaphallic
> Just an idea. Ghosts of People who never existed.

That depends if the abyssal ghosts are tainted or not. Its a template being added over spirits and goetics. No idea if that template is added onto those as a transformation, or if its something they came into being with.

I mean, lets face it, we could be dealing with a Scelesti ghost-mage here. Oh! Nelphandi for the name of abyss-ghosts!

> Originally posted by Isator Levi
> I think the next category after Gulmoth and Acamoth wouldn't be "Abyssal human/vampire/etc" so much as "Abyssal material thing". Stuff like the Invisible Codex or the brain spiders. A humanoid being could be in there, but I don't think it would be approached as its own category.

So, if the Acamoth and Golmoth are the equivalent of Diaboli, we would have the equivalent to the Dominions that could show?

Unlike Infernal demons, though, the Abyss doesn't quite have a shape of its own, it needs to conform to our world in some way. A spirit, a goetic, a ghost, possibly a twisted version of one of the Ananke (assuming they exist as their own thing and not something else). In short, it would need to somehow take on a form that resonates with one of the Arcana, likely the five subtle, but I wouldn't put it past any of the ten. That might have changed, but that's how it was in 1e.

Quote Flag

Blakemikizuki
Member

Join Date: Jan 2016
Posts: 280

Share
Post

04-03-2016, 01:29 AM #94

*Originally posted by MCN

Well, right now, I'm personally assuming it works like Infernal tainting, so only ephemeral entities are targets. That means ghosts, spirits, goetics, and possibly angels (specifically, Exiles who are cut off from the God Machine and Infrastructure, but still are ephemeral entities instead of physical demons). Strix aren't technically ephemeral entities, so they might get a pass. All fae are generally physical creatures, so the same with them. The Qashmal are an unknown quantity.

Probably the same way they deal with the Maeljin and maelnets in the Wounds. I doubt they can tell the difference, if there even is one.

That depends if the abyssal ghosts are tainted or not. Its a template being added over spirits and goetics. No idea if that template is added onto those as a transformation, or if its something they came into being with.

I mean, lets face it, we could be dealing with a Scelesti ghost-mage here. Oh! Nelphandi for the name of abyss-ghosts!

So, if the Acamoth and Golmoth are the equivalent of Diaboli, we would have the equivalent to the Dominions that could show?

Unlike Infernal demons, though, the Abyss doesn't quite have a shape of its own, it needs to conform to our world in some way. A spirit, a goetic, a ghost, possibly a twisted version of one of the Ananke (assuming they exist as their own thing and not something else). In short, it would need to somehow take on a form that resonates with one of the Arcana, likely the five subtle, but I wouldn't put it past any of the ten. That might have changed, but that's how it was in 1e.

If I recall correctly its said that the abyss has no hold on things from the Lower Depths. So Demon from Hell an the Strix should be fine.

Also on a side note would the merit "Additional Familiar" still work in 2E.

Quote Flag

04-03-2016, 03:09 AM #95

*Originally posted by Dave Brookshaw

Awakening 2nd ed does not mention angels or the God-Machine at all.

Enokh
Member

Join Date: Nov 2013
Posts: 474

Share
Post

Is this due to wordspace, or more a reaction to all the crying about Mage Supremacy when it comes to cosmological implications, or whatever the hell people keep blowing up about?

EDIT: Holy shit I just noticed that post was from almost a year ago backs away slowly

Last edited by Enokh; 04-03-2016, 03:11 AM.

1

Quote Flag

Kumiko
Member

Join Date: Apr 2014
Posts: 552

Share
Post

04-03-2016, 03:55 AM #96

> *Originally posted by Dave Brookshaw
>
> Dispel a familiar in 1st ed = dead familiar
> Dispel a familiar in 2nd ed = goes into Essence Bleed unless it has another Manifestation it can use, and you can reattach it.

Very nice. My Obrimos and her cat is totally viable then. World welcome Marley, Marley welcome World. No worries Prime and Spirit at the right levels makes this child's play to handle and probably let your familiar hunt the fools that tried to destroy her without your direct help as a bonus.

Last edited by Kumiko; 04-03-2016, 04:00 AM.

Quote Flag

Mrmdubois
Member

Join Date: Apr 2014
Posts: 6827

Share
Post

04-03-2016, 11:39 AM #97

> *Originally posted by Enokh
>
> Is this due to wordspace, or more a reaction to all the crying about Mage Supremacy when it comes to cosmological implications, or whatever the hell people keep blowing up about?
>
> *EDIT: Holy shit I just noticed that post was from almost a year ago *backs away slowly

It's due to the fact that Mage is concerned with Mage; not crossover except in specific instances like Dark Eras which is more a setting book than an explanation of how Mage works.

Quote Flag

04-03-2016, 03:20 PM #98

Enokh
Member

Join Date: Nov 2013
Posts: 474

Share
Post

*Originally posted by Mrmdubois

It's due to the fact that Mage is concerned with Mage; not crossover except in specific instances like Dark Eras which is more a setting book than an explanation of how Mage works.

Okay, but. . .Mage is everything? I mean if all Angels were Hunter-Angels or something, and only found in Demon: the Descent, or "no don't talk about how Prime can mess with Exploits" or whatever, yeah, that makes sense, boo crossovers. But Angels are in the Corebook for the setting Mage inhabits, just like Ghosts. Hardly a stretch to want, or even expect, to know how Mage interacts with Corebook material.

Trust me, I for-sure get that the Corebook can't do Crossover stuff on any significant level -- maybe a sidebar in Death that's like "hey you can do the same thing to the Dead and Undead that Life can do to the living with equivalent dots in Death -- including Vampires!" and stuff like that, so maybe a "hey Angels are all sorts of weird but ultimately made of metal, so get your Matter on". Maybe a fun Equinox Road (Rites of Spring?) style book that deals with that kind of stuff to a greater extent. Honestly I love the crossover sections in ANY book, because I find that there's a lot of insight to be gathered from an outsider's perspective.

Quote Flag

04-03-2016, 03:33 PM #99

Menace
Member

Join Date: Apr 2014
Posts: 527

Share
Post

Angels are a part of the god-machine chronicle, not the core CofD core rules. Even if both of those are in the same physical book they're not the same thing.

2

Quote Flag

04-03-2016, 03:35 PM #100

Satchel
Member

*Originally posted by Enokh
Okay, but. . .Mage is everything?

Mage has Arcana dealing with two of the three ChroD-corebook ephemeral beings and has access to the world of a third and angels are near-direct extensions of a secrecy-oriented conspiracy-engine whose principal concerned individuals are also secrecy-oriented conspirators. You don't have to circumvent divine schematics to meddle with ghosts and spirits and goetia.

Join Date: Nov 2013
Posts: 9826

Share
Post

Mage "is" the fundamentals as tools for understanding everything else. The Machine is hypercomplicated and decentralized and Its missions override most outside tampering with Its angels. Treating the things that serve as the direct source for another gameline's protagonists as a thing that needs attention in the corebook is out of line with the priorities necessitated by wordcount.

Resident Lore-Hound
Currently Consuming: Demon: the Descent 1e

1

Quote Flag

MCN
Member

Join Date: Jan 2014
Posts: 3479

Share
Post

04-03-2016, 03:35 PM #101

> *Originally posted by Blakemikizuki
> If I recall correctly its said that the abyss has no hold on things from the Lower Depths. So Demon from Hell an the Strix should be fine.

I was only using the Inferno as a point of comparison. I never once said anything about the Abyss affecting anything from that area. Honestly, though, if there's a plot point someone has, then yeah, its going to happen. Story first, and all that.

Quote Flag

Enokh
Member

Join Date: Nov 2013
Posts: 474

Share
Post

04-04-2016, 08:07 AM #102

> *Originally posted by Satchel
> *Treating the things that serve as the direct source for another gameline's protagonists as a thing that needs attention in the corebook is out of line with the priorities necessitated by wordcount.

It's almost as if the bolded was my first suggestion as to why they aren't included in the corebook.

It's almost as if I was asking the Lead Developer if that was the case and thus they might be mentioned in a future book, or if forum blowback about Mage reaching into other gamelines (in a similar way that happened with Arcadia/Arcadia for Changeling) had made him decide he didn't want to mention The God-Machine or it's minions in Mage at all -- and, obviously, maybe a different reason than either of those.

Again, I'm not asking for (or wanting) a full section devoted to Angels, like the other Ephemeral Beings have. What piqued my interest is the statement that Angels (and The God-Machine) are not mentioned at all. No sidebar, no blurb, nothing. Hence my question of wordcount vs. design decision.

> Originally posted by Menace
>
> Angels are a part of the god-machine chronicle, not the core CofD core rules. Even if both of those are in the same physical book they're not the same thing.

And yet, you'll note the rules for Angels are in the core section of the Chronicles of Darkness Corebook -- right alongside Ghosts and Spirits -- as opposed to the section of the book labeled "The God Machine Chronicle".

1 Quote Flag

Dave Brookshaw

Member

Join Date: Nov 2013
Posts: 2081

Share
Post

04-04-2016, 10:38 AM #103

When we wrote Mage 2e, the new Chronicles corebook didn't exist and the God-Machine's servants were like Skinwalkers: the focus of a cool Blue-book, but not a central plank of the setting. It still isn't, and the games following Mage in the second-edition queue don't mention it either.

If we ever did look at them, we'd have the nomenclature problem as Mage already has a class of beings called Angels in it, thank you very much. That inflates the amount you have to explain them; you can't just casually mention a GM-Angel the way you can say "the Unawakened Necromancers called Sin-Eaters" or even more simply "vampires" in text, or readers will think you mean Supernal angels.

It's basically the same problem Changeling crossover has, without the attached history of people assuming things with the same name must be related. Although in dark, unmentioned corners of the internet I have sometimes run across new players being confused about Unchained's fuel trait being called "Aether".

RPG writing is a cross between sheer system design, narrative world-building, and technical writing. If all a mention will do is confuse new readers, you shouldn't do it.

That's not saying "we won't do it ever", but an Awakening crossover section has to explain what everything looks like under Mage Sight, which Arcana affect them bodily, how magic interacts with their own supernatural powers and a host of other things. We do it for Mummy: The Curse in the upcoming Companion volume for Dark Eras, as there's a Mage/Mummy crossover setting in it. It's several thousand words long, and technical, rules-y words at that. It requires an author who knows both Mage and the game in question backwards, who can navigate the heightened expectations of the fans of both Awakening and the other game.

It's a lot of work, that whoever does it deserves to be paid for. That means a book rather than a blog (doing it on the blog would mean I did it myself, and I'd rather spend the blog on things like Scelesti mechanics and updating Legacies), and we have no suitable books planned on the announced schedule.

So, in short - no, it won't be mentioned for the forseeable.

Dave Brookshaw

9

Quote Flag

04-04-2016, 10:47 AM #104

Justin Sane
Member

Join Date: Jan 2015
Posts: 319

Share
Post

> *Originally posted by Dave Brookshaw
> That's not saying "we won't do it ever", but an Awakening crossover section has to explain what everything looks like under Mage Sight, which Arcana affect them bodily, how magic interacts with their own supernatural powers and a host of other things [SNIP] we have no suitable books planned on the announced schedule.

FYI, I'd throw money at you guys to make this book happen.

2

Quote Flag

04-04-2016, 11:08 AM #105

Prometheus
Member

Join Date: May 2015
Posts: 479

Share
Post

I imagine mages would call the things, that have the same names, by different designations. GM-Angels would not probably be "Angels". I mean, it makes sense in-universe. Mages are academics. That's exactly what they would do.

Quote Flag

Previous 1 4 5 6 7 8 Next

Font Size

Write something...

Cancel Preview Post Reply

Copyright Onyx Path Publishing LLC and individual users. Exalted, the Chronicles of Darkness, and the World of Darkness copyright Paradox Interactive AB.
Powered by vBulletin® Version 6.2.4
Copyright © 2026 MH Sub I, LLC dba vBulletin. All rights reserved.
All times are GMT-7. This page was generated at 08:39 AM.