I swear I've seen references somewhere, potentially in the comments, but I can't find it. Has there been any word on how familiars will function in the second edition

I recall Dave saying that "Familiar" is a Manifestation now.

Yeah - it's a Manifestation that stabilizes a ghost, goetic entity, or spirit against Essence Bleed, that they can't naturally develop through their own Rank. You apply it with magic, make it indefinite, and relinquish the spell.

We didn't have room for detailed Familiar rules, Familiar advancement, or Supernal or Abyssal Familiars. They will hopefully make it into some future book.

So there's no embodied familiars?

Ephemeral entities can (and often do!) have more than one Manifestation running at the same time - that's how they Claim people! So if it already bought Fetter or Materialize it can use them. Or you can use Spirit magic to make it Possess something.

So yes, there are embodied familiars.

Will having a familiar still be a merit and if so will it still count against the spells you're maintaining?

Huh... It seems like "familiar", is a lot less of a "bond" in this incarnation, especially if the spirit can already possess things on its own. It seems like it would be difficult to keep the spirit under your control. In 1e, you could just steal all the Familiar's essence at any time from any place, which gave it a strong reason to stay on your good side.

It also seems like it would be frustratingly easy to dispel a familiar.

No, it won't count. That's what "relinquish" means.

I'm rather interested in Supernal Familiars

Per Dave on Supernal Familiars:

> Originally posted by Dave Brookshaw
> You can't have a Supernal or abyssal being as a familiar with the corebook. we might write the rules for it up in Signs of Sorcery, but the changed emphasis on Supernal beings in the setting might preclude it.

Strill: Who says you can't still steal their Essence? Dave hasn't said anything about the stabilising effect being the only effect of the Familiar manifestation. Also, spirits make deals; the ability to exist permanently in the Material without essence bleed or the need(/ability) to Fetter or Possess would probably be quite valuable to many of them.

It also seems like it w

Dispel a familiar in 1st ed = dead familiar
Dispel a familiar in 2nd ed = goes into Essence Bleed unless it has another Manifestation it can use, and you can reattach it.

I think you need to buy it back. 1XP is the second edition cost for that, according to Vampire.
