I have three primary Eras I am considering and one that exists only as a back up, (mostly because I don't want to turf it). Basically, if I can't sum up why it would awesome to have the Era and how we can get a heap of storyhooks and ideas from that crossover in THAT time period in particular, then it didn't make it. More arbitrarily, I'm not going to expand an Era that is already getting expanded or try to add the same gameline to more than one Era or the same Era two different lines. Hence why Promethean in Light of the Sun was cut. (I am considering another Era that I feel is a better fit for a Pilgrimage story and the setting. Double tapped).

The remaining eras I am considering adding to include the French Revolution, the Promethean one and Light of the Sun. With a wild card backup I am really tring not go forward because I am...less than versed on the period in question, amongst other reasons.

So unfortunately I can't do all the lovely ideas. I guess we won't get to see some of them. On the other hand, I am willing to share some of my pitches with the other expanders, in the hopes they might get adopted. The reason I am being intentionally vague now is the Onyx Path legal requirements. Remember, if I share details in public, the writers can't use the ideas.

Understood, good luck.

Promethean and Demon have the whole Angel/Quashmal thing (and could tie into the Industrial and Frontier aspect of it). Steamboats seem a little transient for the territorial minded Werewolves and Beasts, to me, but they could work. Mummy is hard to fit in (and would probably better fit another era with Promethean better), but I can see a few stories in that vein.*

Yeah Demon would be the Best fit for a Prommy Steam boat era, although the writer may have their own ideas.

You mean when the Masada Siege happened? I'd go with Mage or Demon, for war in the shadows, propaganda, ideals clashing and revolt against the "Empire" (with a nod to Philip K. Dick for that), plus Werewolf for territories, strong faiths that motivate to action and because the Shadow back there gives me interesting ideas that are not the classic "the spirit world was a mess"

I would actually be more interested in the Bar Kokhba Revoult, as it was the one in which both the outcomes and the events which led to the two previous events has came into a climax, which ended with the last jewish independent state for the next 1800 years and has deeply influenced the jewish culture and society. Plus, it has Bar Kokhba, which I've always found as an interesting historical, controversial character

It'll be hard to sell me on splats I don't care for like Mage or Beast, but I'd still like to hear all your ideas.*

Vampire would be my pick. The veneer of the South's romantic cultural ideals built on the depredation of slavery, honour killings,family feuds and easily spread disease makes its an interesting setting for Vampire. You could do a lot of interesting things with the setting and Vampire's metaphors. I'd personally run it so that vampire society (mostly) tries to maintain the health of their blood dolls which makes them potentially morally superior to large portions of human slave owning society.

Also how fantastic would it be to see Vampires and Prometheans interact with each other, in the context of humanity demonstrating its best and worst traits? New technology and ideas spreading against slavery and exploitation.

Elder Vampire "You really still want to become human? Look at what they do to each!"
Young Promethean "You don't wish to become human? Look at what they create!"
Elder Vampire "I guess steamboats are impressive."
Young Promethean "Toot! Toot!"

Listened today in Polish radio discussion about first centuries of Islam, so I have some points to it. If you go with 1001 Nights expansion for Mage, Second Chances, maybe point writer also to things - Era is in 750 till 1258 so it's all along creation and rose to power of Ismāʿīlism branch of Islam - group that have heavy connotations of Neoplatonism and Mystagogism in it's practices, both elements highly resonating with Orders. Their belief in Mahdi would nicely correlate with Guardians faith in Hieromagus.

EDIT: Now seeing they are creators of Almut's power and Assasins, I see you wanted to include them from the begining. I just did not know that Hassan-i Sabbah was Ismāʿīlist.

Second, this period is till 1258 - and we know that Corpus Author in Byzantium joined Keepers of the Word and Panscryptiats in 12th century, so before the end of this Era. I know that Caliphates are not Eastern Roman Empire, but they are neighbors, so probably Misterium as unified Order started to spread in them before the end of 1001 Nights.

Also, in 1001 Nights Mage expansion should be Panscryptias and Keepers of the Word splats write-ups, as Era is for the better part of their existing, till the end. Caliphates Diamond mages would have members of both Orders in them.

I think they were the Pentacle at that time. Keepers, Cryptics, Arrows, Ladders and Guardians...After they are also the Pentacle....but the Soul of the Dragon is Pentacle is the name for the Diamond plus Free Council. The Diamond is called so due to the symbolism. Even when they were six orders (Panscryptias, Keepers and Tremere) instead of the modern four they were still called the Diamond so it has nothing to do with the number of orders.

They're named after the Silver Doctrine "the Diamond Precept" ("the Awakened are one nation" or in earlier times "one people") not that there's four of them.

The Pentacle is named after the fact that there's five of them, but it's only existed since 1901.

Well, as 1001 Nights is 750 - 1258 in years than even Tremere go to *and out of the Diamond Orders union table. Both events are from Left Hand Path book (quotes from Mage Timeline project, based on LHP book) :

'8th century AD: Tremere join Diamond - In Eastern Europe, one or two Tremere demanded hospitality at Diamond wizards' towers. Quickly follow them whole cabals, showing carcasses of monsters they fought to assure good intentions. Tremere were warrior-sorcerers and students of the soul who promised to lead the Awakened to a new age of splendor, built on the ashes of burning enemies. They hunted Seers and Scelesti, but demand selected Reapers and vampires as tribute for the balance of their wrath. They preached that Atlantis's faithful willworkers were the natural lords of souls. Anyone who challenged their crowns deserved to burn. '

'1099: Banishment of Tremere - Silver Ladder lictor Caterine Bedlam told the Convocation of Antioch what many now suspected: the Tremere was a Legacy of Reapers who hunted their own kind. It labeled them as Nefandi by Convocation, with banishment and 'forgetting' of Tremere Order members – their magical tools were destroyed, as any grimoires, soul stones, or imbued items they created. Their Shadow Name becomes illegal to utter and were replaced in all Consilium records by "Nefandi:" the name that is not a name and cannot be spoken. As other Convocations followed move that of Antioch done, within few decades Tremere were officially excommunicated from Diamond be every European Convocations, becoming target for Reaper hunters they ones been.'

So 1001 Nights Mage expansions should do justice to 3 Diamond Orders by giving them in the splat write-ups: Panscryptias, Keepers of the World and Tremere Orders.

Well, the 3 Orders write-ups load can be much evenly split IF we get Arthurian Mage. Then Arthurian Britain should take Panscryptias and Keepers of the World splats pages (as 'late Roman Mage' Era) and 1001 Nights expansion just add Tremere to it. Both Eras would be in the same Dark Eras 2 (main) book, in the end.

It would be even more fair, with this as a case, as we know Second Chances wants to add 'correct' 2E Subtle Ones and Assasins to the Golden Age of Islam Era. It's even nicer, as Tremere sounds to look very 'orietal-ish' in Diamond and one is much less than three Orders to add as expansion.

Wyrd, just as the department of expectation management, I can tell you I'm not nearly as interested in Order writeups as you are, so it won't be part of my request. It could still happen, but only if the writers and developers decide that's how they want to use the space in the chapter.

Given the complexity of the template differences, I don't think we'll see the Tremere in DE2 short of a dedicated backer expansion (ie the entire word count)
