I think it'd be cool to just do a Dark Era book focused on a certain area over thousands of years. So like Dark Eras: China or Egypt or whatever and each line gets an era during a specific part of that area's history.

What are you thinking for this group? Hunting Style? Endowment? How did or didn't mundane political changes affect them?

Most of the current eras are too modern, we need "Dark Eras: The electroweak epoch".

I'd love, more than a third Dark Eras book, two alternative options:

1) Dark Eras books related to gamelines. Something similar to Ancent Mysteries from Vampire. In that book you could explore the main events of the history of each supernatural race around the world.

2) Instead of a new supernatural gameline each year, publish a new dark era project each year, centered in one dark era. One year could be Dark Ages, the next one Roman Empire, Ancient Mesopotamia... Each Era could also be centered in a gameline, which a line fully developed, and the other ones having less space.

For instance, Roman times could be an uptade to 2nd edition for Requiem for Rome, having a sourcebook for the other gamelines, and other sourcebooks expanding the setting.
Ancient Mesopotamia book could be centered in Werewold, expanding the Sumerian setting (it was sooooooooo short), having a sourcebook for the other gamelines, and other sourcebooks expanding the setting, etc...

But, if we had a third Dark Eras book, those would be my settings:

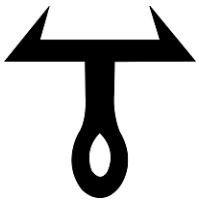

- Vampire: Gupta Empire (India)
- Werewolf: Sumeria (I'm sorry for insistng, but the Sumer setting needs a great expansion. It was too good and too short at the same time).
- Mage: Golden Age of Islam.
- Promethean: The Burning Times
- Changeling: Neolithic (in the same setting than mage and werewolf current dark era).
- Hunter: Book of Judges or Spanish Inquisition
- Geist: Spanish Civil War
- Mummy: Incan Empire
- Demon: Qin and Han Dinasties on China
- Beast: Europe during barbarian kingdoms, just after fall of Rome (Early Middle Ages).

LAND OF THE DAMNED: SPAIN (Spanish): Land of the Damned: Spain, Kingdoms of Blood: Spain; Cities of the Damned: Barcelona, Valencia, Carthian Constitution (1812), Three Arrows Pact:

OTHERS (Spanish): Demon: The Redemption, Bloodlines: The Forgotten

That needs its own gameline to do it properly.

Muon: the Collision

A billion internet points to whoever actually makes that concept playable.

Genius: the Transgression 2E is a thing that's being worked on.

I'm suggesting I'm often more interested in exploring them in fictional stories precisely because I don't live in them BUT they relevantly impact that world I do live in.

I know exactly what I'd do for Hunter... and we're getting Werewolf....

Mage I think is simultaneously one of the hardest, but has the most potential to do something really innovative with - given the rise of Neoplatonicism and Christian Gnosticism.

Changeling I need to think on, given the new way Courts work. I'm thinking of having Courts based around competing myths of the city - a Court of Aeneas (Virgil) and a Court of Romulus (Ovid). The former are loyal imperialists who employ Venus symbolism. The latter are dissident republicans who employ Mars symbolism.

I get where the thematic tie in is (Red Scare and Disquiet) - but what stories are you thinking of that the era is more suited to tell than the Modern Era? I guess it could be a chance to introduce the Zeka to Second Edition with them as a particular era appropriate threat (or pcs).

One Idea I had is for Mongolian Werewolf during the Pax Mongolia of the Mongols. What I like about this as it will focus around Nomads, Where as IIRC most of werewolf's territory is well a set territory. Here though, you move with your human clan that you cling to. Then you have the shamanistic faith of the Mongolians that flows very well with the spirits of the .

I was actually thinking Ivan the Terrible's Russia, with plenty of fallen Mongol presence, would be a good Werewolf setting.

Everything Promethean-relevant about 50's America also appies to the 30's. For Promethean, I think the 50's Soviet Union would be a better match.

Last time this subject came up, I suggested the Spanish Civil War for Vampire, Mediaeval or Imperial Russia for Werewolf, the Triple Alliance (aka founding of the Aztec Empire) for Geist, the aftermath of the Great Fire of London for mortals, WWII for Innocents (but evacuees rather than the London Blitz), and Renaissance Italy for everyone (but I think it would suit Beasts pretty well now they're added to mix).

Werewolf: That would be great to revise and flesh out. Especially now that the Fall of Pangea is set as late as it is, I'd actually revise "Wolves of Sumer" to be before the Oaths of the Moon. That can actually be the culminating event of the era, as falling from power, the Forsaken Tribes resume their role as hunters taking up Father Wolf's duties.

Changeling: That would be at the top of my list to add to Bull & Bird (along with the Baal-Hadad, tying them into the Bull God/Pangean). My thinking is to latch onto the medieval link between disabled children and changeling myths, and specifically use the idea that when there are too many mouths to feed in a primitive society, children are left to the elements, and disabled children are especially likely. Sometimes though, they come back as emissaries of the gods they were left to.

Hunter: Book of Judges I'd make a crossover with Mummy as "the cults of foreign gods corrupting the Children of Israel" are perfect antagonists for the Judges. Inquisition particularly interests me for the opportunity to see the Church's pre-Malleus Hunters, timeline wise the origin of Malleus, and how they came to obtain their Benedictions.

Mummy: As I mentioned earlier, my idea on this one to focus the setting on the Twice-Risen

I think I mentioned it the last time it came up, but this would be legitimately fascinating... and all kinds of apocalyptic. The odds of Twice-Arisen becoming Shuankhen are pretty substantial. It would be interesting to see the consequences of Twice-Arisen becoming widespread play out, but it would be all kinds of gory.
