Oh wow. What an awesome and yet difficult question. I'm going to answer just as my own personal choice, rather than what I expect to be profitable, etc. Also I don't know what the current picks for all the Dark Eras are so sorry if I overlap.

Vampire: 9th Century Francia under the rule of the Carolingian dynasty.
Changeling: World War 2 France.
Mage: The 12th Century Renaissance or 1st Century (CE) Byzantium.
Werewolf: Early Colonial America.
Demon: The Russian Revolution.
Hunter: American Civil War.
Geist: The Black Death in Europe.
Mummy, Promethean and Beast: I don't know well enough yet.

Also I really second Innocents during the London Blitz, it's perfect.

I've actually been tempted to write up fan-splats for some as yet unexplored Dark Eras but I wanted to have a look at the first Dark Eras book when it comes out first.

Vampire: 1950's Americana (I'd call it something like Doo-Wop Requiem or Rock & Roll Requiem)
Werewolf: Tsarist Russia circa 1710 (the time of Peter The Great)
Mage: Classical Greece (any era in this time could work)
Changeling: The Edwardian Era and World War I (a direct sequel and epilogue to Victorian Lost) OR New Wave Lost
Hunter: Puritan New England

I'm not as familiar with Geist and Promethean, and I have no interest in Demon or Beast, so I can't really comment on what would be good Dark Eras for those gamelines.

Beasts in the Colonialism Era. (1500-1600)
Columbus just discoreved the new world,and now every single explorer with an atitulde thinks they have the right of rape and pillage this land.and they think the natives can't stop them,after all they guns and the natives only have bows and arrows. but the Children of the dark Mother are part of the natives and they're angry.
The Namtaru had to watch his friends die of a disease brought by the spaniard scum,now he's going to make them just as sick,with interest,
Jorge Alonso de San Diego was an portuguese explorer,who wanted to see the New World out of curiosity,but when he saw his men,people he thought were his friends. killing children,he renounced all ties to the old world,an medicine man Devoured his soul,and Now he's the Nemesis of all of his old people.

I'll probably post some more later, but right now what I really want to see is Bronze Age Collapse (1200-1100 BC) Beast. I want to see what being a Beast and Hero was like back when they mattered. If you had to pin me down to name an actual region, I'd probably choose Anatolia or Syria.

Anything in ancient China, really. Especially Wuxia Mage would be interesting challenge for writers, due to Mage philosophy being ultra rooted in western thought.
Or, for something totally different, Wild West Hunter.

There's a fair amount of Indian concepts in Awakening cosmology/terminology as well. Hence the significance of "To the Strongest" mingling Greek and Indian cultures as the groundwork for the Diamond. That said, seeing a Chinese Great Cult would be cool.

My pick for Ancient China is Qin Dynasty Vampire, with Covenants that rose of the Hundred Schools of Thought. The Legalist Covenant (which in addition to bureaucratic governance of vampires is also the culture's "we are monsters who are supposed to keep humanity in line through fear" faction) is beginning to enforce 'Shu' (the Masquerade) on the rest of the Kindred. The Confucian Covenant (feudal rule + serving as active "ancestors" with filial relationships with living family and necromantically with the passed) is fighting back HARD.

If I wanted to go far afield for Mage, that one I would do Incan or Aztec with, Or maybe Inuit.

Now that's an impressive piece of work.

Beast: Colonial Australian with Dreamtime tied stuff
Demon: Ancient Egyptian, considering how they did things like build pyramids to line up with certain stars
Geist: Ancient China, with things like how they venerate their ancestors and Vampire: Aztec, I mean blood sacrifices and a sun god sounds pretty fitting to me.

I've said it before, but I'd do the following:

The Hungry Eye

Geist / Werewolf / Changeling

The Great Potato Famine of Ireland, 1845 - 1852

There's a lot to work with in this setting.

- Sin Eaters dealing with mass graves, huge amounts of death and trauma, and a massive influx of ghosts. Importantly, huge amounts of ghosts who haven't been put to rest properly. How do you calm the ghosts of an entire mass grave?

- Werewolves dealing with the huge trauma on both sides of the Veil. Hunger Spirits going crazy, ridden husks wandering the country with bloated bellies devouring anything and everything they see (people, grass, rocks, trees), with destroyed jaws and mouths. Also, spirits of rage, fear, desperation in full force.

- Motleys roaming the countryside, trying to stay out of trouble, maybe help people where they can. Less of an obvious "thing to do" here, but again, would suit the mythology of Changeling (I think).

A bit of a grim setting for many perhaps, but I'd be very interested in seeing that come to pass.

Just spitballing some ideas I had that I'll probably never use.

Mortal/blue book minor templates WWII. Not one where you're soldiers on either side but civilians displaced by the conflict. As refugees you're considered easy prey by many supernatural threats. Some were brought out as weapons by one by the Axis or Allies, most are just opportunistic and going after victims that no one expects to survive.

Beast or Changeling Counterculture 60s: I've seen the fan made Hunter version of this era but I think it's more suited to the more dream inclined splats. A time of wonder and hope for the future built up around a deep underlined fear that the future wouldn't come. Giving Beasts and Gentry a like lots of deep seated issues to prey upon. Plus a reason to actually use the drugs and glamour rules.

Industrial Revolution Demon: Pretty obvious, a time of great expansion in infrastructure at great cost of human life. This obviously would have been a big time for the God Machine, perhaps even one of it's first big pushes for expansion. Which no doubt lead to many a fall as those expansion projects start to interfere with one another.

Oh wow... how did I never think of this idea. I love it. I'm adding this to my list of games that I need to run some day.

I'm personally looking at that as an alternate Innocents chapter myself, but Innocents/Demon Industrial Revolution would be totally rad.

This is a major theme in what I'd do with Wild West Demon - the Unbound running trying to stay free or create their hells on the frontier, but the rapidly expanding infrastructure of the God Machine with industrialization is always closing in.
