It's a little late for that.

Not necessarily. If you are already creating a book with more new settings you could easily rename it to Dark Eras 2. But that is not the point..
I would like to see interesting plot ideas to support the storyteller. And yes, I would prefer a clean separation like I mentioned, but this is the "ideal" solution in my opinion. They could also split the book and add a plot section, or whatever. There are already so many good settings in the first book, that I think that the whole "Dark Eras" materials would be more enhanced by good plot ideas instead of new settings.
However this does not mean, that I don't understand that other people want to see a certain setting in the next book. 😉

Waiting for new Chronicles of Darkness Dice! 🤗 🎲

I would love Angkor as a setting!
Spread over an area larger than modern day New York City, with up to a million inhabitants, it was an enourmous centre of culture and trade - from the 9th to the 15th century. Towards the end, it was the largest metropolitan area of the world at the time! Even the Chinese were impressed with what the markets of Angkor offered - the Khmer were masterful traders and craftsman. At the same time, the culture faced problems: a climate change that threatened their current methods of transportation and access to water, pride, religious dispute (Hinduism was being replaced by Buddhism, and the new leaders wanted to show off, prove that they were richer and better then the previous ones), a rising rival power in the Thai...
I see quite some potential for Changeling there, but I think Demon would work rather well, too. In addition, with such riches and rare materials available, I can see bands of Hunters coming all the way, just to stack up on necessities for hunting down their target. Vampire, Mage or Beast would work in the setting, too, but imo Changeling, Demon and Hunters have the most potential here.

YES. I actually suggested this to a friend of mine a few weeks ago and I completely forgot. Changeling: The Lost [Generation] would be amazing.

I'd like to see an Era about the emergence of Ventrue. Not necessarily their origins, but how they affected kindred society and how kindred society would look like after the fall of the Camarilla. Where the Ventrue actually came from could rather be used as a set of story seeds.

I think to remember that Dave said the Pancryptiates and the Keepers splats will be in Dark Eras 2.

I don't like this, but it's purely personal preference. I really, really love how the Ventrue are just kind of there after the Fall of the Camarilla totally usurping the role of the Julii and there is zero explanation. I'm sure it can be done well, and I'd happily read it and devour it, but the Ventrue just kind of taking the place of the Julii with total explanation left to the ST is one of my favorite parts of Requiem.

I wouldn't go so far as to say there's zero explanation, there's plenty of hints, just no clear-cut description of how it happened. Which, like you, I think fits.

Perhaps a suitable compromise would be the rising of another clan that has gone extinct, or maybe the death of a more prominent clan.

Alright sure, there isn't ZERO explanation. There are many explanations (The Ventrue are the Traditores! The Ventrue predate the Julii! The Julii were a Ventrue bloodline! The Julii were actually a GANGREL Bloodline! The Ventrue just ARE FLAT OUT the Julii, but the Strix didn't destroy them. Yet.) just no definitive one.

I like that there's no definitive one. But I'd be lying if I said I wouldn't still buy and read The Rise of the Ventrue. I just kind of don't want there to be it.

I would like to see other extinct Clans, though. Or perhaps just have another Dark Era set somewhere else in the Roman Empire than Rome itself, with the Julii back as one of the five clans. That'd be pretty cool.

As I wrote I didn't ask for an explanation for where the Ventrue came from. That works best as completely optional story seeds. Rather, how the integration and rise of Ventrue as a clan could definitely use some attention. Just remember that a Dark Era also focuses on a certain geographical area as well meaning Ventrue in other places may have completely different kinds of interactions with the other clans.

Edit: For example, the spread of Ventrues to the New World would have a lot more culture vs culture as they come with the European conquistadores and explorers, while Ventrues in Italy might have to fight for a new clan identity in order to get accepted. Anyone who mistakes them for Julii would certainly fear the return of the Birds of Dis.

To revive an idea I once tried to run but didn't have the group for: New France in the mid-1700s, with the Seven Years' War driving conflict between France and Britain, as a Vampire setting. You get all sorts of fun toys (a possible prelude to the Montreal setting, pirates and privateers, some of the important figures of the American Revolution), and can frame it as a mirrored conflict among the dead, with the Sanctified backing French Catholic colonial efforts and the Invictus standing behind British mercantile interests, as well as a chance to highlight native vampires as the largely dominant power, possible with now-vanished Clans, Bloodlines, Disciplines, and Blood Sorcery.

Remi. she/her. game designer.

I would spend all of the money on this. Colonial New World is my jam. Vampires are also my jam. Jam squared.

I would love to see more Vampire stuff like @atamajakki @RomulusGloriosus. Especially colonial Vampire, XVIII, XIX century. Together with my friends we played in Europe and USA for many years. It's good to make some changes.

More about Dracula or Dracula's brides, Eastern Europe in XVI, XVII century would be cool, too.
