I've seen a few people mention non-Euro/American settings and while I don't disagree, I have absolutely nothing against eras set amongst other cultures in different periods, I think the main reason for doing Eras with a European or American focus is the ease of understanding the setting for the non-history buffs.

While I don't disagree, I think it's a little redundant to do chapters on parts of history that are alive in the popular consciousness to begin with. It's not like there isn't plenty of material out there to inspire games in such settings, or a lack of readily available information on said settings. Dark Eras was certainly at its most interesting when it decided to push the limits (To The Strongest leaps to mind).

Personally, more Mummy material is my own selfish wish. Mummy feels like it draws the most out of Dark Eras (it's the only game line where you can be in the middle of a normal Chronicle when the book releases and be able to immediately use all of the content without breaking stride). Plus it's my favourite. Total bias.

That said, A Handful of Dust is the only chapter so far that has made me play a game I had not been seriously considering. I'm currently in the midst of writing a Dust Bowl Promethean game, and while I'm not using a huge amount of the "canon" content the setting was so evocative and appropriate for its game line that it drew me into Promethean on those strengths. More of that would be cool... even if I don't physically have the time to run every game at once

You're going to write up a Let's Play of that Dust Bowl game once you start playing it, right? RIGHT!?

Well.... some "Alternative" or "future" eras might be nice. A defined Metalground/World of Tommorrow or so on... but I won't hold my breath.

Otherwise... hm... I think most of the eras I want have basically been covered. Hm... well, did we cover the American and French Revolutions yet?

Mechs: Because even the Chronicles of Darkness needs robot fights.
DarkFrame: Crossover setting that puts Chronicles of Darkness in the far future that is Warframe.
Monarch: The Endless You are an alien ruler, charged with maintaining a people who you shape to suit your needs.

That's Mirrors territory, not Dark Eras. Although I would love to have a Kickstarter for a book of Mirrors settings for each line too!

I want the Eras to be more than just 'what the splat is doing there at that time.' Give me a hook that really highlights the Era. As a similar product, Sothis Ascends really emphasizes the contrast I see with some of the Dark Eras. On one hand you have the first Sothic turn, with a modified character sheet and new creatures running around like the sha. Then the other two chapters just kind of describe the different civilizations at the time, but the first one told a story. The Sundered World, To the Strongest, the Geist one, too, I suppose tell a story. I want Eras like that. These were times in the splats' history.

Some of the Eras that didn't make it around the first time I'd like to see include French Revolution Mummy, Book of Judges Hunter, Jazz Age Vampire, and Wild West Geist.

While many Immortals are given treatment in this chapter the Purified are absent.

Seconding everything @reseru says (don't I always?): Eras should be chosen for strong themes and opportunities to tell us a lot about their chosen gameline, not just because "oh man, I bet that was a cool time."

Two words:

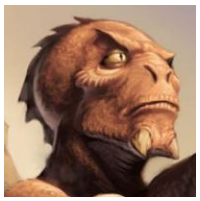

Weimar. Germany.

I have decided, after some thought, that I don't really feel happy on these forums. I might decide to come back to post. Who knows - but right now, I'm gone.

So good bye, good luck, and have a nice day.

Well, you don't have to wait for DE2 for that, just the Companion.

A friend of mine who majored in history came up with a list of, like, four of five really awesome ideas. I'll bug him again about it tomorrow.

Given that I majored in Islamic History, the more I see of it in Dark Eras, the happier I will be.

Are you calling the DE Companion DE2? It's creating confusion for me.

The DEC is written and working its way through the process as per the Monday Meeting Notes. DE2 is something I believe Rich and Rose have said OPP are planning, after the success of DE and the massive interest it has generated.

Forsaken By Rome is in the DEC. The rules for making Pure chatacters that appear in it have already been spoiled by Stew.
