Are you calling the DE Companion DE2? It's creating confusion for me.

The DEC is written and working its way through the process as per the Monday Meeting Notes. DE2 is something I believe Rich and Rose have said OPP are planning, after the success of DE and the massive interest it has generated.

Forsaken By Rome is in the DEC. The rules for making Pure chatacters that appear in it have already been spoiled by Stew.

Apologies, I meant the Companion :P

I agree with you on all points @Second Chances. Being in South East Asia, I would love to see more hot spots beyond Europe (not that I mind Europe).

Here's my wish list:

Rodrigo Borgia Rome
Clandestine Lancea et Sanctum and Invictus politicking during the splendiforous reign of the worldy Pope Alexander V. French invasion, Milanese aspirations, jealous cardinals, wild-eyed monks, and papal mistresses.

The era of Charles V and Suleiman the Magnificent

It's a titanic showdown between two 'Defenders of the Faith' as they vie for the soul of Europe while consolidating their grand empires. Fortresses are sacked, and Martin Luther's Reformation runs rampant. In the midst of chaos, Hunters question their allegiances, and turn on each other - Catholic vs Protestant vs Muslim.

Haitian Revolution
Latin America's first independence movement and modern history's largest slave uprising is the backdrop to the fleeting, combustive alliances with the Haitian Freehold. Here the Gentry take on French, African, and Vodou flavors.

Japanese Occupation of the Philippines and the Liberation of Manila
The Imperial Army invades the then-American colony hours after Pearl Harbor. Includes the Battle of Corregidor, the Bataan Death March, and the tragic Liberation of Manila. The Exarch of War reigns, while Manila's Awakened fight a losing battle to preserve the city. When the smoke clears, Manila will become the second most devastated city of World War II.

Iranian Revolution of '78-79
Argo from a Promethean perspective. Angry mobs, the clash of Westernization with Islamic piety, and the return of Khomeini all while the Created desperately seek to understand the human experiences of love, faith, and sacrifice. Elsewhere the Arisen attempt to reclaim forgotten relics across modern Persia.

Hong Kong 1997
Britain returns the port of Hong Kong to China. The transition may be peaceful, but not for the island's Kindred. Tempers flare when local vampires, used to running their own affairs, must now accept overlords in Beijing.

Reeeaallly want a larger Muslim-majority area that focuses more on the people in it. Mummy was all well and good, except for that you play as outsiders, and the game is even more founded in pre-Islam Egypt. I want a setting that explores the bredth and depth of the Mesopotamian mixing pot. Geist/Mage/Changeling 8th-10th century Baghdad/Samarra would be fun. I've heard Demons in Istanbul as a great idea as well. Vampire Mamluk Jerusalem could be fun (offering the devs a new opportunity to get better Muslim covenants).
Terpsichordean's Promethean/Mummy Iranian Revolution is brilliant, I love it.
Sybaris + Disquiet works so well for eras such as this.
Would also be good to have a 19th-20th century mid-colonialism era. French Morocco would be an interesting place, for example, not sure what line I would run it with though.

Isn't the demon one already an Era in the initial book? (I don't have it on me sorry).

Yes. Technically Constantinople. As we should all know, Istanbul was Constantinople, now it's Istanbul, not Constantinople.

(Not sorry, if my Islamic History Professor can get away with showing this in class, its fair game)

To be fair, Istanbul has such a storied history that it could easily fit another

Demon era (or two or three) in after everyone starts calling it Istanbul consistently.

I'm going to break my earlier "go for strong themes mote than fun settings!" rule from earlier and say that Victorian Hong Kong and 1830s occupied Shanghai would both be incredible kitchen sink crossover settings.

Someone will probably point out that a writer has already said otherwise, but I imagine if we're ever going to get a kitchen sink setting, it would be in the Crossover Book, which would show examples of said crossover in said kitchen sink setting.

It is perfectly within Demon's themes to have multiple instances of the City named Istandul and Constantonpole.

Mechs: Because even the Chronicles of Darkness needs robot fights.
DarkFrame: Crossover setting that puts Chronicles of Darkness in the far future that is Warframe.
Monarch: The Endless You are an alien ruler, charged with maintaining a people who you shape to suit your needs.

Here's a few pitches, I'll add more later...

Qin Dynasty Vampire: Covenants that rose of the Hundred Schools of Thought. The Legalist Covenant (which in addition to bureaucratic governance of vampires is also the culture's "we are monsters who are supposed to keep humanity in line through fear" faction) is beginning to enforce 'Shu' (the Masquerade) on the rest of the Kindred. The Confucian Covenant (feudal rule + serving as active "ancestors" with filial relationships with living family and necromantically with the passed) is fighting back HARD. Meanwhile a Taoist Covenant explores the mysteries of Blood Alchemy. If the chapter is expanded, it incorporates "Immortals" updates for 2nd Edition.

Wolves of Bau (2nd Editon): Updated with the revelation of how (relatively) recent the Sundering was, this setting is represented as being before/during the Oaths of the Moon. The rulership of Bau is a failed attempt for the Uratha to carve out a place for themselves in the world before turning instead to readopting Father Wolf's cause. The Oaths of the Moon are presented as a Rite that exists in the setting, readopting the lost auspices at the cost of losing the special advantages of the Bau setting.

Underground Railroad Changeling: The thematic link is obvious, and the (dangerous) use of Trods to facilitate the escape of slaves opens tons of plot potential. You also get the veneer of of "Antebellum romance" with appropriate focus on the real darkness of the era. With expansion, I'd incorporate it Brazil, Dahomey & Abeokuta, linked by Trods along lines of the Wyrd to the US's underground as well.

Haundenosaunee Hunter: Set during the birth of the Haudenosaunee (Iroquois Confederacy), the Conspiracy the "Sons of Sosondowa" are brought together by Hiwatha and the Great Peacemaker themselves to carry out the Great Law against cannibal witches and their cults. Probably lean to the earlier date interpretation, tying it to the 1142 solar eclipse.

Dante's Italy Geist: Late medieval italy as the Holy Roman Empire and the Papacy wrestle for power. Ideally this setting will tie in Inferno updates for 2nd Edition, with a whole metaphysical plotline about the Underworld accessible from Italy's Autochthenous Depths are being corrupted by demons, making Sin-Eaters all the more important to save the dead.

Fifth Turn Mummy: Update "Infinite Macabre" to 2nd Edition. The search for Alaru in the stars themselves.

Near Future Demon: Update "Bleeding Edge" to 2nd Edition. The hook for this setting is that the God Machine is maintaining multiple "futures" (well... presents) simultaneously, and the Unchained have the ability to move between them. So you have the "total global surveillance state integrated directly into the infrastructure of the Machine itself" future - you have the "rival megacorps vie for power comodifying Pacts and Embeds" future - you have the "environmental catastrophe" future - etc, etc.

"Terrible" Russia Beast: Ivan the Terrible serving the role of Apex, links the birth of this diverse empire through fear pretty well to Beast, with plenty of room for other supernatural weirdness for Beasts to be Kin to.

I'll reiterate my usual pitches of Ayutthaya Werewolf, and either First or Fourth Crusade middle east Werewolf. However, I'd also be tempted to fish through Ming Dynasty history for weird events that a good Werewolf chapter could hang off; or alternatively I'd want to go with 1800s Hong Kong Werewolf, specifically the bit where the British conflicted with the five Great Clans of the walled villages in the surrounding area.

Or, alternatively, 10th Century Poland Werewolf - the Baptism of Poland in 966, the annihilation of the pagan faiths and the beginning of the Polish nation. Or maybe the later 1300s or 1400s with the wars with the Teutonic order.

Or, fuckit, Vatican Werewolf during one of the particularly turbulent eras for the Papacy.

Or Attila: Total Werewolf because, again, why not.

I want Ayutthaya Werewolf something fierce, but all of those would be awesome. Vatican Werewolf would be super interesting, especially since it is way out of where you would usually expect Werewolves.

Heh, those all sound good. I don't know why people like Bau werewolf, it's utterly disassociated from its time period and is something you could pull off in modern day with a couple rites and gifts and the appropriate community.

That's something that should change, and these books seem like fine places to do it. Werewolves aren't all primitive barbarians, they aren't part of the wild or associated with nature. They live in cities and politic with everyone else just like vampires and mages.

That's why I want to use it to make a distinct period showing the post-Sundering pre-Oath Werewolf world and the nature of the Oath.
